

“You will know them by their fruits.” Mt. 7:16

My Approach to the Topic

This website was derived by permission from the exhaustive resources on the "Wesleyan Heritage Library" Cd and Dwayne Maxey's even more exhaustive "Holiness Data Ministry" Cds. Much is rather raw scans of heritage material done with difficult early software without any context provided. In both CDs the old English was often incomprehensible. Scanning errors were not uncommon.

I was not biased in this work. I obtained my degree in geography and Urban Planning back in the sixties before I was saved. My asset was a sharp mind given years of time while convalescing from crippling Mercury Poisoning. I was highly motivated because I had obtained entire sanctification years before, but did not know how to understand or explain it to others. My heart was changed to be marvelously pure but my mind was unprofitable. So I read. Month after month, year after year. I read until my eyes were red from those old CRT monitors. At first I just read those articles that caught my eye, but those authors would discuss the work of other authors. I would refer to them and see for myself, until gradually out of it all, a comprehensive context fell into place .

Wesley. At first he was often misunderstood, but after a couple of generations of theologians clarifying controversial elements, his accurate understandings became crystal clear to those who did not drift off topic of a miraculous heart-holiness into their own self-made ideas. These authors corresponded in every way with what I observed every day in the new pure heart He had given me. They made obvious intuitive sense, and were internally consistent. They conveyed a clear message without confusion, so I stayed with them and stayed out of theological trouble.

My purpose was not doctrinal, denominational or theological. I was virtually innocent of all these since my only church experience was with a small independent church. Instead it was to come to a proper understanding for myself and then become able to share this marvelous new dimension of Godliness with others.

So theologians that pit the words of one dead author against the words of another dead author in order to make obscure points do not impress me. I leave them and their cerebral debates alone.

Instead of following endless theological debates, I simply omit authors who are not consistent with the pure heart within and each other. This avoids sending a mixed message that confuses rather than edifies.

So, in short, I have distilled the sense out of these endless numbers of heritage authors for your sake, so if you want to join the truly Sainly, this website is your gateway. It is not easy. I do not try to make it easy, because you need to dig in order to really find the hunger and the faith for it.

(Note: Catholics talk much about Saints. They have their own unique political process that takes decades or more to decide who is a Saint according to their hoary traditions. Here we are instead discussing a stainless spiritual condition and the work of grace by which it is obtained. Why should we be distracted with official designations or special veneration?)

All of this is real. It was the secret behind the power of the early church. But for generations the Romans very efficiently slaughtered these stalwart believers for refusing to recognize the emperor as divine. They also put so many lions in the Coliseum that they depopulated the wilderness....

Others they worked to death mining on an island after cutting off intimate body parts. At one time the church in Rome had lost another Pope to the Romans, and the only spiritual man they knew of was a lonely shepherd, so they appointed him. The Romans soon came for him also....

Over the Centuries since antiquity, souls here and there have continued to enter into His Rest even though they were almost completely devoid of real knowledge about it. Often, they undertook such feats of faith, that their names are remembered even today.

John Wesley had the best education available at the time. His hungry soul looked everywhere to solve the puzzle of Godliness, and after years of travel and controversy it fell into place. He came to understand what the all ancient forerunners were trying to say. He put it into practice and then he preached it. His words bore fruit by thousands coming into His Rest at a time when debates raged because they still thought nobody could know if they were saved or not, until they stood before the judgment seat!!!

Wesley interviewed great numbers of those who claimed to have entered His rest in sanctification to verify both his theories, and their experience.
